

Getting to West Orange for Shabbat

West Orange is located approximately 15 miles west of Manhattan. Many residents commute daily into the city, most commonly to Midtown or Lower Manhattan. The typical commute into and from Manhattan during the weekday rush hour takes about an hour door-to-door. There are buses to the city from a number of locations in West Orange, and if you can drive to a nearby train or bus station, the options increase.

To get to West Orange for Shabbat, the best options are:

- DeCamp bus from Port Authority Bus Terminal directly to West Orange
- New Jersey Transit train to Brick Church or Orange stations (approx. 3 miles from the community)

The bus will take you to the shul and within close walking distance of homes in the community, and the train is a short drive away. We can provide rides from either the bus or train. Please contact the organizers for more information.
